Sustainability & Andara

Grounded in the notion that people's well-being is tied to their surroundings, Andara reignites our connection to the natural world from the comfort of home, forming a wholesome co-existence with growing things. From the customised breeze block facade that protects from outside gazes whilst cooling the home, to the flexi rooftop with space for a garden or urban farming, Andara recaptures the nostalgia of shared living in verdant, contemporary settings. The outside world brought into play via an internal courtyard, wide floor-to-ceiling openings and living foliage. Beyond its aesthetic appeal, Andara stays true to Sime Darby Property's sustainable and responsible development agenda, incorporating features such as a solar PV system and rainwater harvesting system to optimise energy and water use, benefitting both the community and the environment.

Generously spread across three storeys, built-ups start from 4,100 sq. ft. in a variety of layouts with wider porches that can fit three cars. The home's open concept and hackable walls ensure interiors can grow with children, accommodate grown children, elderly parents or loved ones who come to visit in comfort. Every storey is intentionally designed with flex areas that are adaptable at any time to suit any preference or shifts in lifestyle whether it is a home office, playroom or personal gym. Open balcony structures add to this, making future extensions easy. The rooftop terrace provides ample space for more rooms and an edible garden. Andara for the Generations

They say that when well-being includes heart and mind, everything falls into place. Accordingly, Andara embraces the family as individuals whilst prioritising harmonious co-existence between different generations in one place. Combining independence and connection with safety and mobility, accessible features are detailed into the home's settings. Allowing family to go about their day without being underfoot. Selected home zones carry universal design to be inclusive. Doors are wider and ground floor bathrooms have sufficient turning radius for wheelchairs. The internal courtyard doubles as a future space to incorporate a lift. Ramps as well as provision for step-free entry, hand railings and dual key entry are in place should the need arise. This affords autonomy, balancing the need for private and communal spaces to gather, share meals, tales and unforgettable moments.
